In addition to the largest dollar value of new bids outstanding, we also have the largest amount of customer funded research and development under contract in the company’s history. The level of internal R&D funding will be maintained, as well, to ensure that we take advantage of new business opportunities on the horizon. In order to support these expanding opportunities, we have begun and will continue to hire additional physicists, engineers, marketing staff and manufacturing support personnel. These opportunities entail programs where we have unique competencies namely secure communications, navigation and command and control systems.”

Stanton Sloane, President & CEO stated, “I am pleased with the continued progress we are making on many fronts...hiring key staff, significant advancements on key technical objectives, improving financial performance and increasing operational efficiency. We now have the broadest, most robust technology development portfolio ever. Compared to both our prior fiscal year and prior quarter, revenue and backlog increased sequentially, a solid indicator of improving performance. Inventory management, as well, continues to improve and we continue to streamline our manufacturing operations. Increasing revenues in the second half of the fiscal year are expected to positively impact gross margins with a resulting improvement in operating income. We will also continue to rationalize our foreign subsidiary, which will ultimately have a positive effect on the bottom line. ”
