

Frequency Electronics Appoints Hugo Fruehauf Chief Technical Officer

MITCHEL FIELD, N.Y., May 04, 2005 (BUSINESS WIRE) -- Frequency Electronics, Inc. (AMEX: FEI) announced today that Hugo Fruehauf has been appointed Chief Technical Officer (CTO) of FEI. Mr. Fruehauf had previously served as President and CEO of FEI-Zyfer and its predecessor company for 7 years. Mr. Fruehauf, age 65, graduated from DeVry University with a degree in Electronics Engineering. His career included senior technical and leadership positions with Alliant Techsystems, Datum-Efratom and its predecessor, Ball-Efratom. He has achieved special recognition for his contributions to the development of the GPS satellite.

As Chief Technical Officer of FEI, the corporate parent, Mr. Fruehauf will contribute to developing FEI's proprietary technologies and new products and will coordinate corporate-wide R&D activities among each subsidiary and affiliate in the US and abroad. He will support the world-wide marketing of FEI's synchronization products, with emphasis on military GPS-associated applications, SAASM, precision navigation, and network security. Mr. Fruehauf will also participate in the Company's ongoing initiatives to identify candidates for merger, acquisition, or partnership.
